Mission Statement: Pride-Passion-Purpose

Opening

As a staff and school we have begun this school year discussing the importance of relationships. Through relationships we build trust, loyalty and a sense of community within our school. Relationships between parents, students, teachers and the community play a major role into the perception and effectiveness of a community school. The cornerstones for success lay in two key areas, these components are something every single person can control each and every day. 1) Enthusiasm—all great teams, organizations, people, etc. have enthusiasm. Be excited about what you do, have a purpose, work to be the best you can become. Once you put enthusiasm into everything you do the second component will come easily. 2) Industriousness—this is just another term for working hard. The more enthusiastic you are about your goal, job, etc. then the more likely you are to work hard to accomplish your task. Enthusiasm and Industriousness are two areas that each and every person at PHS can control every day. These are the virtues we need to build upon so we reach our goal, which ultimately is the success of our students whether it be academically, physically or as a human being.

“Success is peach of mind which is a direct result of self-satisfaction in knowing you made the effort to become the best you are capable of becoming”

-John Wooden
